

The Award

The James J. Fuld Award is presented by the Working Group on Legal Opinions to an individual or entity that has made a significant contribution to the field of legal opinions in business transactions. The James J. Fuld Award is designed to honor and encourage individuals who write and educate in the area of legal opinions as well as bar associations, law firms and others who contribute to the development of the law or practice in the area of legal opinion. In the case of organizations, the award is given in connection with a project that contributed to the development of law or practice in the area of legal opinions in business transactions.

Background

The James J. Fuld Award honors James J. Fuld (1916 - 2008), a corporate lawyer of great stature who practiced in New York at the law firm of Proskauer Rose LLP. Mr. Fuld's article, "Legal Opinions in Business Transactions – An Attempt to Bring Some Order Out of Some Chaos", is the seminal article on the subject of legal opinions. Legal opinions were folklore before his article and after, they became a subject for intense study. Mr. Fuld had been a guiding spirit in the formation of the first bar-sponsored legal opinion committee, the TriBar Opinion Committee. Mr. Fuld understood the need for a national approach to legal opinions and took a leading role in inducing the ABA Section of Business Law to organize the Silverado Conference in 1989, which was the first attempt to forge a national approach to legal opinions.
